

Ensuring Refueling Assistance at the Pump

There are 10 Million
Drivers with Disabilities in America...

...How are
You Pumping
Their Gas?

Among those drivers we surveyed, 95% said they would switch brands to patronize a company that pumps their gas. Our FuelCall™ system provides the communication tools and supporting marketing efforts to steer these customers to your station. And it creates a uniform operational plan for both jobbers and corporate.

“ I saw your product at a trade show and knew it was the answer. It has been one of the best investments I have ever made. The customers love it and the employees love it.”

— Robert A. Weber, Sr.

Newport, Delaware

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) requires all self-service gas stations to pump gas for their customers with disabilities when there is more than one employee on duty.

FuelCall™ takes the guesswork out of refueling assistance

Signage on your station's marquee (a) lets disabled drivers know that assistance is available. On the designated island (b), dates and times of your refueling service are clearly posted. Using the BigBell™ touch pad (c), customers alert your staff that they need assistance. When the chime rings inside the convenience store (d), the attendant goes out to assist the driver.

"The FuelCall™ system allows the attendant to be alerted when refueling assistance is needed—creating direct communication between driver and attendant and eliminating confusion. FuelCall™ also gives us the opportunity to accommodate the customer by offering our C-store items such as beverages, snacks and other novelty items. I like the signage with the hours of operation because our customers know when more than one attendant is on duty. FuelCall™ increases independence while providing the best service to our community."
